1. The statistics below were compiled by specialists in the German Central Administration for Industry in conjunction with their respective counterparts within the SMA for transmission to Moscow at the end of February 1947. Despite the assurances of Marshal Sokolowski, the proposed increases in productive capacity were rejected, with the single exceptions of steel and passenger cars noted below. The plan as it stands received the approval of the planned-economy section of the SMA.
2. In the last two columns of figures, which apply only to the Russian Zone, those statistics preceded by "a" refer to the output of German firms; those preceded by "b" to that of the Soviet A.G.'s.
